OPEN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Order of Independent Americans Opens its Eastern Convention in Court House. Address of Welcome by Mr. Benner.

The ninth annual convention of the State Council Order of Independent Americans opened in the Court House at ten o'clock Tuesday with several hundred delegates and a large number of visitors present. Mayor J. Louis Bream presided and introduced Chester C. Zeamer who acted as host.

The meeting for the Bergen of this town is welcoming you to our midst and I am glad to have the honor and pleasure to occupy this position.

We are a fraternity, thought of to those who received the idea of perpetuating and preserving this great battlefield that it should be an object lesson to the people of the country for generations to come; not only as an object of study for the military men, who could learn lessons and have the display troops so that he might take advantage of the weaknesses of our country but as a still greater asset for the American citizens who could come here and learn of the great sacrifice of the men of the north and south, that we might live.

This purpose has been carried out and the memorial has been developed step through and now this historic ground, as a whole is thoroughly invested with this thought.

"It seems peculiarly appropriate that an organization based on the principles which you uphold should have its convention assembled in this field. You come here not only because of the historic interest that attaches to the battlefield but because you realize that the principles which you uphold should be the principles upon which the foundation of our country rests.

"We that know many basic ills, but we do not go there to find it, each condition exists. It is the duty of those fully informed to acquaint and teach you what you are supposed to uphold to suppress such a tendency.

"I advocate a program which a visit to this field should teach you. May they be impressed with the spirit that You have dedicated yourself to combat principles, principles that you and I believe are the support of every American citizen in the United States.

"The citizens of Gettysburg extend to you a most cordial welcome. We are glad to have you here and we hope that you will enjoy your visit and that nothing will be done to mar the pleasure you expect to have while here."

Mr. Benner's address was followed by very hearty applause and after a few announcements the meeting for the forenoon was adjourned.

IMPORTANT CASE FINALLY DECIDED

By the refusal of the Supreme Court to grant an appeal from the Superior Court in the case of Catherine Borsher vs. Charles J. Bohner an important title, which affects several titles in Adams county and elsewhere in the state, is finally decided. Earlier in the summer the Superior Court had affirmed Judge Swope [illegible] Adams county court last year. Under the purchase land, on which a house has been charged by partition proceedings, is personally liable for the second interest although the land itself becomes worthless. This is the last opinion of the court rendered on this question in Pennsylvania, and is of concern to conveyancers as the owners of real estate and to the law generally, effecting as it does the title to many lands throughout the state of Pennsylvania.

In his case cited before Judge Swope the action was brought by Catherine Borsher, widow of Harrison Borsher, against Charles J. Bohner to recover an undivided interest in real estate valued at approximately $1000. The land on which the interest was claimed was practically worthless because the mill building in it had been condemned by the fire and had not been replaced by Mr. Bohner and the land could not be sold for enough to pay the second dower interest due the widow.

The court held that Mrs Horsher could proceed against other property of the husband's estate. Mr. Bohner contended, to the Superior Court, that the land was the only property subject to execution, which contention was overruled by the Superior Court.

CHAPTER XVI.

In Which Ebenezer Capen Is Surprised.

Before sunset that afternoon the Rap Jones was anchored behind the point by the inlet. The fishing boats clanged peacefully and moved lazily on, for not a single one of their owners would trust himself within a hundred yards of the witches' brigantine.

The largest of the boats absentee, was which stood by itself a quarter of a mile from the light, was hurriedly prepared for use as a packhouse and the sick sailor was removed to it from an improvised stretcher. Dr. Parker and Captain Jeff went with the patient, and, assisted by old Simeon Crosby, got him up to the deck and lowered him into the dory. Then the doctor rowed to the beach and the rest of the crew followed in the second boat.

The shanty had three rooms, one of which was given up to the patient, one was used as a living room, and, in the attic, Cagey and the assistant keeper slept. Mattresses were procured, blankets borrowed, townspeople donated canned tables and chairs, and the bullet wound was made as comfortable as it could be, under the circumstances. Sign boards, warning strangers to keep away, were erected, and in addition to these, the Trustee Lighthouse Corps spent stretched across the lane on both sides of the shanty. Their orders and signs were superfluous. The news of the arrival of the Rap Jones had spread to every cranny of Wellmouth within an hour or two. Even the driver of the mail wagon, on his way to the post office with a package of groceries, pushed the package under the door and then turned "Here you be!" and, whipping up his horses, departed at a lively pace.

The village set up sights to discuss the affair and every day brought a new sensation. The excitement over Jim Jones's crew, a wretched, pathetic, drunken crew of half-breed Portuguese, were apprehended on the streets of Denboro, Wellmouth and Trumet on the bay side, and were promptly separated and locked up, awaiting alignment in the hospital at Sesuit. Every day there were fresh arrangements. The brigantine would be towed into Denboro harbor from Cuba Island, the sick would be taken to Denboro Hospital. Two days out, and the plans were changed, the sick and the packhouse were to be towed to Sesuit. The sufferer, a sage from Turtle Island, the only man aboard who was sober and also dead. The skipper, who was the owner, the mate and the cook, and the vessel was in a state of demoralization which the Wellmouth Magistrate named Stratford, could not overcome. Then followed the second sights of calm and terrible heat, of perilous calms and hot misery. The same himself died. There was no one left who understood navigation. So the mate came a southeast gale and the Rap Jones drove before it, helpless, and at least her steward the Cape. The survivors saw her last as a speck, then cleared, and reached shore in the lugger. The sick man was carried to the bed in the forward room of the packhouse.

Chapter XVI. Simeon Was Willing, their conversation was limited to the weather and the sick man. Simeon was the only one who could converse with the doctors about the latter. That was all, yes. Santa Maria! was not a talker.

Captain Zeb Mayo went about cheerfully his old persons. Many were the delicacies to be pushed under the crevice for the invalid's consumption. The parish committee, at a special meeting, voted that Simeon Crosby and indeed a weekly service of prayer for the sick and sufferer of Cape Cod.

Rachel Coffin was, perhaps, the one person most disturbed by her parents' decision. She would have gone to the shanty immediately had not Dr. Parker prevented it. She was as glad of this as he or at this point, but that was the only point. She was sure that Mr. Hickey cannot or would not attend to his own affairs. She was sure he would, and she was sure that he would not. Keziah, after more expostulations, had left her in a huff message. She wrote to Grace and told her that the sick man was the mate and nothing of the minister's part in the affair. Grace replied that Rachel's secrets' enough already."

The sick man grew no better. Days and nights passed and he raved and muttered or lay in a stupor. Dr. Parker acted as day nurse while Hickey slept, and at night the assistant keeper, Cagey, went on watch. The doctor was hopeful, he said there was always hope. A question of time only, and of careful nursing.

Capen accepted his mind with appeal and continued living his own life.

"Do you know, parson," he said, "that I've got to be a regular old fuss-budget since I've been a widower. Why, I'm never happy unless I'm fussing over something. I'm crushed from one end of creation to the other, I guess, and I shall have to fuss over myself."

Then he went on to explain that he was a widow, at least. Two, he guessed, even she had grown up hope of Capen with her own eyes.

"And say," he added, "I'm not sure, but I could be, that is whether you think I could be, but I thought of doing the Denboro County Medical Society when it meets in Trumet next week and had presented myself to take it in his place. But I don't want to bother you if you need me."

Mr. Hickey said that he did not need anyone, was getting along finely, and would not hear to his resignation during the medical society's meeting. So the physician left. John Hickey did not feel cheerful that afternoon. The tired feeling he had spoken of to Capen at his worse than he had Ebenezer'd it, and he was preoccupied. Not without reason. That sheet he slept uneasily and awoke with a start. He did a cold, pouring rain beating against the window of his room.

He lay down on his bed and tried to sleep, but found he could not. He was always with a start and either a chill or fever fit. He head began to ache violently. He got up, drank some cocoa and misery, fear began to take hold of him.

Night came. The rain had ceased and the wind had veered, clear. Over the shanty the mistiness tossed on the sea and moonlight flooded the room and the two rooms. He wondered what time it was. He must look at his watch. He was alone, for Cagey had gone to the lighthouse. Why didn't some one come? Was he going to be left alone there? Was somewhere in or near the shanty? He must look and see before he died. He called for help over and over again.

The wind full cold on his forehead, and he thought he was in the dory again. What was the thing across his path? Was it something alive? It was moving there he ropes in that house? There was a light in the window. Some one climbed over it and it was a climb of hundreds of feet and the wind made him giddy. That was a house, and there was a man in it. He must have living in. And there were limbs on the branches of the tree that was the light at the parsonage. And a big lighthouse was there, too, on the church bell and he would be late for the service.

Some one was speaking to him. He had been in a dream, but there could be no mistake. He was not alone. He wanted to hear. He must hear. He opened his eyes.

Then the voice had gone. No, it had not gone. It was there and he could hear it speaking to him, begging him to listen, explaining. It was in the room somewhere, in back, back in something of fleet and fat. He must see it. He must see about his wallet and some one was holding it. Some one had been living in. And there were limbs of

CLASSES HOLD ANNUAL SCRAP

With Regular War Paint on their Faces Freshmen Charge upon Sophomores and Succeed in Binding Every Opponent.

Mixer Field on Saturday witnessed the exciting tug-o-war between the freshmen and Freshmen classes, the contest which has supplanted the barbarous rush which in the days gone by has been formerly participated at the opening of the school year. Twenty-five husky Sophomores almost two to one the Freshmen completely vanquished the second year men and artfully succeeded in carrying every one of them off the field. The final score was 24 to 11.

Previous to the tug-o-war the fight was between two teams of ten picked from the two classes. Freshmen were given a two yards and the attention of every spectator was directed to the big contest of the afternoon.

Taking the spot end of the field the opposing parties rushed pell mell down their lines and the battle opened with a mighty shout and cloth which soon threw look like so many lunatics. The men were for the purpose of presenting the fiercest and having the newcomers the best of them on sight. At the other end of the field were the Sophomores, if they were less terrorized looked the part, were more determined. All on both sides had a good supply of vaseline for they knew what was coming to them.

At the sound of the pistol the two opposing parties rushed pell mell down the field at each other, meeting in the center where the fray was at once engaged. Both sides were game to the end, the various men set to work to bind hand and foot as many of the opposing force as possible and when so secured they were carried back to the goal line and counted. Only a few Freshmen were left when the last Sophomore being too busy defending themselves to see that his opponents were all bound up, this was called at the end of twenty minutes it was found that every Sophomore had been victim of the fighting strength and prowess and was safely bound.

The affair was presided over by Professor Lawrence Lee Clowser, chairman of the athletic committee. Clowser, however, was not the only prisoner being safely bedecked "to-ede" in an effort to escape the numerous missiles which at times were very economical, only one particular one of which it is said he so slightly as scarcely to be worth mentioning. Professor Clowser was also the time keeper and the squads of umpires and referees, and a crowd of interested spectators witnessed the performance of the event.

The victory gives the Freshmen an rights or privileges The caps tattoos, stripes and ribbons, where they may have been since the opening of college.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

EVERY hour more than one loaf of bread is made in the kitchen of the pale hour three—if they have one. All the rest is made in the bakery.

COMPANY DISHES.

What a feeling of security it gives a housekeeper to have in her store room, pantry or cabinet a few of the needed accessories for a meal. She is a most unfortunate woman if one which it is a delight to visit. She liked the formal meals of Washington's time; a hunt her cook because there was a dinner in the house to be served.

Just have a few things that are kept for company, and if used are not quickly supplied. One does not like to do it if boughten cakes or cookies be eaten, as the recipes which we contribute to this column and in the valuable proof, make such delightful substitutes as must soon be used.

A small cake which can be put into a screw top jar and covered to keep from drying will keep for month, and be sure your dinner is always ok for it. The recipe is:

Fruit Cookies—Cream and stir to-gether a pound of cakes, add a cup of sweetened or other nuts as desired: two cups of flour, a cup of shortening, a teaspoonful of cinnamon or spice to taste, a teaspoonful each of soda and cream of tartar, a cup of milk, a teaspoonful of vanilla, and enough flour to be served in loaf a cup of boiling water, put in a loaf of sweet milk, a teaspoonful of salt and three wall beaten eggs. Bake in a moderate oven for 30 min. Bake in pan pans, a tablespoonful in each pan. Bake in moderate oven for small cakes, which will keep and taste fresh for days.

"There is something uncommonly appetizing about a cookie jar filled with delicious cakes that is made within. One may always have a few kinds on hand, and they will keep for a month.

Peanuts cheese, with saltines and muffins, is a dessert which will be satisfying.

A cup of dry cheese grated and mixed with a tablespoonful each cream, red pepper and onion juice or a teaspoonful of salt. Put in a saucer with a cloth dampened with vinegar. Cover with another saucer and let stand for 24 hours. Serve on crackers or as much more sharper may be put up-on the cheese. Keep in a cool place. Is tasty when needed.

Cheese balls with cocoanut and a few chopped pickles, moistened with a little mayonnaise. A mixture of cheese served on lettuce, makes a very nice salad. Use a French dressing.

A few cooked peas left from dinner, a few beans, a few cold boiled beets, they were served, added to a slice, or two of bacon, fried, a poached egg and a lettuce leaf makes another salad enough to set before anyone.

LENT is the heads that tuft the hills with green.

WAYS TO USE PEANUTS.

Peanuts are good with bread crumbs mixed and in a meat loaf, served with tomato sauce as a meat loaf.

Mix the nuts finely ground and mixed with creamed butter or sweet cream, a very good sandwich filling.

Pea salad, they are good in combination with cabbage or sprinkled over lettuce, a French dressing. Peanut butter makes a variety for sandwiches. Mix the nuts finely ground, butter and tea tablespoonful of beef extract, a little salt, a little cream, a few drops of worchester and Tabasco sauce.

Peanut Fingers—Roll out sweet dough, spread with a pound of peanuts ground fine, mixed with a cup of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Put a pound of butter in the center of the dough and roll over the best until mashed, then fold the dough over the butter and pour into a greased pan. Mark off in squares and bake. Cut the squares as the roast is melted, the easily and serve hot or cold.

Peanut Candy—Prepare a quart of peanuts, as above; roll them with a rolling pin and mix with fine bread crumbs. Boil together six ounces of sugar and a pound of light brown sugar for ten minutes, stirring constantly to keep from burning; add the peanuts, and when cool work off in balls. This candy is delicious and is by far the best peanut candy one may make.

Nellie Maxwell.

TWO BATTING KINGS BE MADE BALL LEAGUES

Tyrus Cobb, Champion of American League.

At the bat way ahead of the rest of the major league seasons, Cobb and Sisler, batsmen on the rival Detroit and Boston leagues in the matter of batting prowess, in the American league the last several weeks was held by Tris Speaker, the accomplished outfielder of the Boston Americans. Ty Cobb, batsman, in the last week or two has started in remarkable form. In four successive games he has batted safely to the mark 14 hits in 18 times at bat, which is a batting average of .777 and these hits included two home runs, three three-bagged shots and three baggers. As the result he has moved forward to the head of the National swatters with an average of over .400. In the National league, Heinie Zimmerman, the hard-hitting third baseman of the Chicago Cubs, continues his work with the stick and has a comfortable lead over all his rivals, with figures of about .370. Heinie Groh, man is also doing some great longdistance batting.

That's What the Umpire's For!

Umpire George Hildebrand of the Federal league baseball league cities following plays as the hardest on the umpire: Two men on bases, runner out at base liner; an interference play; a man on first, batter hits second and two strikes and three balls called on batter; a man on third base with winning run going over the plate, calling for a decision; a close steam umpire, to be in position to see a decision, a double play at first and a man on third.

Fred Clarke Plays Golf.

Fred Clarke, the Pirate manager, has taken up golf as a side line, and has driven a golf ball from near the pennant club clear over the left field fence at Pittsburg, and now professionals are trying to coach him to drive so he can locate the first. None has succeeded.

Satisfied With Duffy.

Wm. Clarence, owner of the Hillsdale team, says she is well satisfied with Hughie Duffy as manager of the Brewers and that he will be there another season.

"Cy" Young Is a Writer.

Cy Young, the veteran in writing baseball stuff, has written a story about love in order to make good in the big leagues.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

Leaf, after all, Babe Marquard was the first Giant pitcher to lose three ballgames.

Tarreau is the biggest man in the big leagues. He weighs 241 pounds. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall.

The way "Slagging" Ball is going this season a hitter's life is going to be a hum in the big show next year.

Tom Rice's family is the most baseball in the country. Four brothers are baseball players.

Umpire Bill Klem says Amos Strunk is the fastest man in baseball today, and he should know, for he has seen all the Olympic fame.

Fred Clarke is to retire as manager of the Pittsburg team, and Hans Lobert Murray is to succeed him. Oh, yes, nobody's surprised.

Slim O'Loughlin is getting to be a baseball magician. The latest stunt he's dug in a game at Philadelphia he even knocked the bat boy.

Cy Young says that all the really great players were born in this country. For instance, Cob Ruth Washington and Tyrus Cobb.

Cy Barnet of the Dodgers is saving up his money. He's going to get married soon, guess this season and was presented of the skin with him.

Talk about winning streaks, in 1870 the Boston Red Stockings won 39 games on the home grounds in succession. Some team that was, eh what?

John Gluck is not overconfident that his team will be able to pull through. The Woodlawn batster is too good a baseball player to be surprised by sure thing.

Baseball fans are going to present Clyde Miles with a gold crown for his head and if you don't know what the dickens he'd do with it ask Umpire Owens.

Manager Mack of the Athletics says of the Cardinals has shrewd Miss Bresnahan at the helm he will be the best fooling shortstop in the baseball circuit.

McGraw says: "You can have your Cobbs, your Lajoies, your Chases, your Bakers and all the rest, but I'll take Hans Wagner for mine as the greatest star."

Jimmy McConnell, the stronghold twirler of the Highlanders, has been released to the Reds. Manager Steely work has made McConnell a consistent performer.

TO MAKE CHANGES AT COUNTY JAIL

Will Install Entire New Sewerage System and Heating Plant. New System Similar to that in Eastern Penitentiary.

The county commissioners have decided to make some needed and radical improvements at the jail, and been aware of the contract for an entire new sewerage system for the jail building and prison yards while the latter improvements will be completed with the most modern penitentiary sewerage system.

At the April session of Court this year the Grand Jury reported among other things that the sanitary conditions of the jail were deplorable. The county commissioners took note of their complaint and decided to install a system in each cell and throughout the jail corresponding to that in use at the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia. It is the most approved and most modern system in use anywhere and will bring the local jail up-to-date in every respect.

In former years the building was heated by a hot air furnace located under the corridor of the jail. The corridor and cells will be heated by this hot air system while the house was heated by steam from the boilers at the furnace. Last winter this cell gave way, causing the boilers to be shut off from the residence portion all heat. It is necessary to have a furnace put in to install several stoves to keep the prisoners comfortable until the repairs are made.

Now the entire property will be heated by hot water from a central heating plant. The contract for this and the other work has been awarded to Wm. Rice & Son, of this place.

Mr. Auxer's bid includes not only this work but the removal of the present sewerage system. The sanitary department to the women's department will be changed to the building of a new main and the entire job complete.

NEW ARRESTS IN ROSENTHAL CASE

Material Witnesses Detained When About to Flee.

$10,000 FOR A CAPTAINCY

New York, Sept. 30.—Harry Pollok, in whose apartment "Bald Jack" Rose was arrested with the money in his possession for sale, was arrested on a body attachment as a witness in the Becker-Rose proceedings in connection with the Rosenthal shooting.

Information reached the district attorney's office that Pollok was about to sail for Europe, and Acting District Attorney Rand asked Justice Seabury for a body attachment in order to insure Pollok's presence at the trial of Police Lieutenant Becker, charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

"It is true," said Pollok, "that I had loaned accommodations on the Aquitania and was to have sailed; but when the district attorney's office told me was acting and would be back at noon to-day, I am the manager of Pollok's Wants for the Week, and he was entrusted by me for the purpose of mailing it after I was abroad. As far as the Becker case is concerned I do not believe material witness anyhow. My complete story has been told to the district attorney and the grand jury and there is no reason I should want to avoid going on the witness stand."

Pollok was held in $2000 bail. A woman who was with him at the time of his arrest was also held as a material witness in $2000. It developed that Pollok had evaded a subpoena to leave his home by way of a fire escape.

It was a field day in the afternoon investigation of the police department by Captain Smith's sleuths, made for and under the supervision of Commissioner Waldo, who pleased to evidence, nothing if not fair play. It was a field day, also, in that the captaincy of police, with a salary of $10,000 to win his promotion from a lieutenancy to a captaincy.

Captain Smith was placed on the witness stand later. He testified that he had no idea who was to get the money but he thought he was to be "the lucky boy between." He was sure neither Commissioner Waldo nor Chief Inspector nor Mr. Hassett was destined to get any of it.

The captain said he really had no money and he was very "flabbergasted" when he talked about his brother's bank account in the Knickerbocker Trust. With refreshing frankness however, he admitted that if he could have raised that amount he would gladly have paid $10,000 to win the promotion, because "the job was worth the money to me."

The inquiry was asked, and insisted to explain this remark, he said he meant it would be worth $10,000 because a captain would not have to work so much as what as a lieutenant and he could sleep more at home.

Commissioner Waldo said that he had not taken any steps to investigate the late trial to Smith's affidavit. He had not reported the matter to the district attorney, because he did not "like to do anything like a complete chain of evidence."

Mr. Johnson took the stand and denied emphatically that he had a captaincy said Smith that it would cost him $10,000 to get his promotion. He admitted that Smith had gone to see him, but said that it was to ask him what he could do in the subject of securing the post but, Johnson, told him he was a fool if he thought he could attain his purpose in that way.

Day by day the president has watched the Red Sox keep up their strides toward the pennant and the moment the event was made at the executive office that the president would announce the "date" when the first game of the world's series is played in Boston.

Taft had hoped when he came to Beverly that the Washington American league team might win the pennant and expected to see at least one game on the Washington grounds in which his favorites figured. With the Washingtons out of the race, however, he turned his allegiance temporarily to the Red Sox.

TO MAKE UP BUDGET TO SHOW SYSTEM

Taft Wants People to Become Familiar With It.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 30.—President Taft, who is to give the people the opportunity to become familiar with a budget system of estimating revenues and expenditures whether congress passes a budget or no.

In a bill passed by congress and signed by the president within the last hours of the last session it was directed that estimates should be submitted to congress as heretofore, but that they should be accompanied by a budget system of appropriations that has reached the conclusion that there is no way to avoid a deficit without sending along the estimates in budget form. It is the president's desire to ask for use in framing bills. In this way the country will be given an opportunity to get the attention of the country focused upon a subject which he believes is most important. The president probably will make a statement soon regarding the budget system.

The declaration of Hiram Johnson, Theodore Roosevelt's running mate on the Bull Moose ticket, that the next Republican character in all American history is the president, appears to have aroused more interest and indignation among the Republicans than any other feature of the campaign.

Democrats as well as Republicans are writing to Beverly to tell the president elsewhere expressing their disgust and indignation. The democrats still standout too to the fact that they admire and respect the president, even though they differ with him in politics, and that they have unanimously refrained from anything approaching a reflection on his high character.

LONG COATS NOW REVERSIBLE

What more applicable term can be found to describe the fall coat than reversible? The very meaning of the words seems laughter a double coat, and in no season's styles is it accomplished more emphatically than in the fall mode.

Long coats are making one of the reversible ideas. A double effect is obtainable by turning over one revers, buttoning back another style, or debuttoning a seemingly permanent collar and changing its adjustment with an entirely new effect.

For the storm coat there are many reversible ideas, but the simplest of the rules to be placed by the purchaser is that the coat must be full and unlined. Rubberized silk is the favored material here, into a plain protective collar.

A storm revers is commonly the proportion pulled out and in, a vest is revealed that has been concealed before.

Monochromes are placed in seasonal places, but if you investigate, you will find that they have a use in the reversible act that is played by the happy woman.

One coat can be transformed into another by the simplest methods, which is characteristic of the new reversible.

The rain in the woman's style has been held to be unbecoming, and couples charm in loss and ornamentation when features that promise satisfaction to all.

FRESHENING UP OLD GOWN

Little Touches That Will Give New Appearance to Garment.

Is Tired Of.

Every woman has a scrap or dark silk dress in her wardrobe for each day, and the best method to freshen a dress that she is tired of is not hard to find. Many of the best dressed people but no suggest having a set of dress clothes for the morning and one dull hit with deep border in dull blue linsley. Her very best dress would do the last two days. The collar is the vest, the cuffs, shawl, three and a half or four inches deep, with twice that long at the front. Cut the goods to the white part by means of the attaching of the dress itself. This will give it a crash but nobby effect. The placement of the white goods can be lieved by tiny straps at the white goods to the dress itself. This is a material brother. The cuffs match the collar. Let the shawl hang loose. This set worn with a straight skirt and plain shirtwaist is very pretty and inexpensive. If you have a fertile imagine, set it off most completely.

STRIPED COTTON DRESS.

White cannaris with a blue stripe is used for this dress. The skirt is made in set to the bodice with a narrow band of plain blue cannaris. The is also used for cutter and cuffs and tab below collar, fastening with a button. Materials required: Four and one-half yards of cotton, one-half yard of plain for trimming, three buttons.

Fatal Freezing Temperature.

Many of the smartest hats have a very fine bunch of flowers placed in the most careless manner anywhere on the hat. Flowers are also very much used of delicate tweeds for mossstone, with delicate frills covering the brim. It has a tiny pink rose rimmed with forget-me-not on the extreme edge of the brim at the left side.

A wreath of oats, mingled with flat rosettes of very bright blue forget-me-nots, looks charming on a hat of the picture type carried out in white felt. Small blue velvet ribbon is used for the decoration of the model.

Plaid flowers are also found, but they are of an immense size, which is a disadvantage to the small head worn hat, of a round shape, trimmed with a band of velvet ribbon, a bow of the same and a quill.

WILL BE UNDER ROOF THIS FALL

Federal Building Work so far Progressed that this Assurance is Given. Rows Placed and of the Columns.

Sufficient progress has been made on the new federal building to assure that its being under roof before cold weather sets in, in fact, progress has been being made for the erection of the roof.

The stone work of the rear and two ends of the building is practically completed while much remains to be done on the front. The first of the six large marble columns on the portico has been placed in position and the work of placing the others will be done as rapidly as possible.

The contract calls for the completion of the building according to the original plans. It was found impossible to put ample amount of that stone and the idea had to be abandoned. The columns are of composite style. They are fluted and will be one of the distinctive features of the edifice.

Much of the stone has been placed for the portico and room of the granite for that portion is here and will be put in position. Considerable serving will be done on the marble over the top of the building after the stone work is completed, the season where the serving is to be done being over here in the winter.

Mr Bradford, representing Ambrose B. Stannard, the contractor, has succeeded J. B. Fairlid who has been in charge since the erection of the building was commenced. The new man will take up work of a similar nature elsewhere, after the close of his work of the northern states. He expects to leave Gettysburg in a few days.

ON OUR BATTLEFIELD SHORES

The "Reporter's Nosegay" of the Philadelphia Inquirer has fallen in love with Gettysburg sketch:

"The sojourner given by some citizen of the Gettysburg battlefield guides are in fancy as they are shifty in their observers," said a veteran member of the G. A. R., who has been there on bloody field. "Every year I have made it a point to spend a couple days in Gettysburg, and I have been host to the best guides and the worst. Some were guides, and I have also been host to some of the worst of the fake guides, who have known, have never been historical students in the field, and obtained what little they know of the battle from the memoirs of those who were there. I remember one time when I was visiting a battlefield with a party of friends and we had engaged one of these guides, who was known, have never been a historical student

RAISED $22,735 AT DEDICATION OF NEW CHURCH

Handsome New St. James Church Dedicated on Sunday in Presence of Large Audience. Remarkable Display of Liberality when Subscriptions were Asked.

With impressive ceremonies and a remarkable display of liberality, never before equalled in Gettysburg, St. James church—handsome, edifice, and splendid in every way—on Sunday dedicated to the presence of audiences which filled the large auditorium.

While the dedicatory services were the culmination to which the people of St. James and of the town in general had looked forward for over a year, the raising of a sum amounting to almost $23,000 toward the debt of the church was the distinctive and remarkable feature of the day.

At the morning services after an eloquent sermon by Dr. J. A. Clutz, the financial statement was read by Prof. H. Nelson Sloth. It showed that the indebtedness of church and parsonage with furnishings had been $50,500 at the start of this $75,000 had been raised leaving a total yet to be secured of $24,500. Of this amount $17,350.00 is covered by a mortgage and $10,000 of the debt across the mortgage remains

It was stated by Dr. Clutz who took charge of the soliciting that $5,000 be raised during the day to raise the latter amount and when the evening service closed it was found that not only this had been done but that about $7,000.00 additional had been promised.

In securing the amounts for new subscriptions Dr. Clutz asked that some one who could contribute to give first. There was a slight pause until Mr. Stan Gerwig, of Baltimore, known by very few in the congregation, walked to the front of the church and announced that he would give $5,000.00. It was such a surprise that the audience apparently forgot they were in a church service and spontaneous applause followed. Mr. Gerwig was a member of the Primary Department of St. James Sunday School in 1887 and was a poor boy for some years but later went to Baltimore where he was very successful in the cleaning business and takes great delight in contributing to religious movements

Following Mr. Gerwig's liberal gift eight men arose and promised gifts of $500 Four $250 gifts followed, with a sum total of $2000 and $500 promises and then a call was issued for $100 subscriptions. These came in great numbers and it was some time before Dr. Clutz announced that they would receive gifts of $50. Again there was a liberal response and after all these had been taken over $18,000.00 had been secured.

A pause in the receiving of individual subscriptions was then taken to hear from the various organizations. C. E. Hauer announced that the collection of the Sunday School had agreed at the morning service to contribute $2500.00. Mrs. H. E. Hauer presented $500.00 of the Mite Society which has already done extensive work, including the recarpeting of the church. The Brotherhood promised $500 and the Christian Endeavor $250. The Infant Department of the Sunday School had given $210 earlier in the services while the choir gave $175. Another collection of $50 was then received before the close of the service and the total subscriptions for the morning reached $18,000.00.

At the evening service the campaign was again resumed and the total was run up to $21,235.00 before it was decided to stop. At this point Mr. Grocht, who had contributed $1000 at the morning service, arose and said that it was just as unmanly to be out that he would duplicate all subscriptions made between that time and ten o'clock. Instantly there were new subscriptions of $25 each. Two $100 gifts followed and before the time had expired $200 had been secured. Mr. Grocht announced that he would duplicate this with $10 additional making the total for the day $1,000.00. Dr. C. E. Hauer promised to raise $250.00 additional which brought the total for the day to $22,000.00 and to this was added $235.00 in loose collection bringing the grand total to $22,735.00. Of this amount $1124.97 was cash.

A demonstration quite unusual at the close of the unusual six months and lively applause resounded through the church. A Chautauqua salute was given Mr. Grocht and Miss Anna Wolf who, he declared, had brought him to Gettysburg for the dedication. Earlier in the day Mr. Grocht had excited the emotion of the Sunday School library and gave instructions that it be filled with new books and the bill sent to him. He also gave $10 to the infant Department.

While the taking of this large sum of money was the feature of the day it in no way eclipsed the deep religious significance of the dedicatory services.

At the morning service at half past ten o'clock, well in the church, with a seating capacity of eight hundred, was occupied. Included in the audience were a large number of the older members of the congregation who had been brought in automobiles of the various members. Among these were Mrs. Mary Mencburg aged 91 years, the oldest member.

The choir sang "Lift up Your Heads" from Gaul's "Messiah" and the congregation united in the responsive reading and the Gloria Patri. The Apostle's Creed in which all joined heartily were sung and Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Dr. Bikle. The Rev. Dr. Bikle used at the dedication of the old church and his prayer being used. Rev. C. E. Hauer offered prayer and the sermon followed by Rev. J. A. Clutz who used as his text Matthew 20: 8, "Call the laborers and Pay Them."

With five bands, two drum corps and about five hundred men in line the annual convention parade of the Order of Independent Americans was held in Gettysburg on Tuesday afternoon and witnessed by a large crowd as it proceeded over the various streets of the town. The column was in five divisions and led by its own marshal, Chief Marshal Wm. Metz. Towers led the parade with his ladies and said following them came the "Citizens' Band. The local musicians were the parade uniforms which they secured for their entrance day and made a fine appearance while they fully lived up to their reputation as a concert organization, contributing freely to the enjoyment of the parade.

Headed by a drum corps several companies of grounds, some in dress and others in khaki uniforms, marched the Gettysburg band and made a very good appearance. All carried arms and for a time the column seemed quite a martial appearance. These guards have been camping at the east end of town, about their arrival here on Monday. The officers of the organization followed in the same order.

As the Eighth Regiment band passed the Judges in the Square they struck up in lively tune "Everybody's Date To." The band wore their khaki uniforms which they use in the service as a National Guard organization and were well received all along the line. Following them were the Carlisle Council which is white and surrounding a huge United States flag. This council, by the way, has been awarded the first prize of $60 for the best marching in parade.

The Harrisburg Drum Corps led the delegations from the two cities in the vicinity and then came the Shiffington Band followed by the Littlestown Council with the largest number of men in the parade. The latter also received the prize of $60. Dallastown's fine band and the Dallastown council, also largely represented, came next in line and then the Citizens' Band of Littlestown. This last organization wore grey uniforms and caps with white trousers and high black leggings They were followed by the Pottstown Council with the largest number of members carrying red and green umbrellas.

Battlefield Council 717 led by the degree team in honor was brought up the rear of the column The Gettysburg boys were vigorously cheered all along the line of march and made a good appearance. The judge, W. J. Ziegler, John D. Keith and Harman Martin gave them honorable mention for appearance.

The route of the parade as mapped out by the committee reached almost all the principal streets of the town and everyone had a chance to see it. The line of march crossed Centre Square three times and before going through the third time it was halted when order to arrange for the review. The officers of the organization took their position between the judges and Marshal Towers and his aides. The parade then passed in review much after the manner of a military parade, the bands remaining in front of the reviewing party until the commands in which they were attached had passed, and then falling in after them.

A feature of the parade was a large tented wagon filled with women here for the convention. They waved their flags vigorously in applauding spurts as they passed the reviewing stand and generally enjoyed the event hugely as they rolled by. The music for the parade was numerous and were brought in by the different bands.

Before leaving in the evening Pottstown, Dallastown and Fightly regimental bands gave concerts which were enjoyed by the Gettysburg people of the town.

BUSINESS SESSIONS

Reports heard at the business sessions of the convention showed a large membership in Pennsylvania, of 40,000 in the state alone. The order has also six new councils established during the past year and has been active in the increase of over 1000 in membership. The business sessions showed a proportionate increase in prosperity. The order is now represented in three states besides Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey and New York.

The order decided to increase the orphans' tax from ten to fifteen cents a month and the following officers were elected, state councilor, John F. Lewis, Braddock; vice councilor, Joseph McClellan, Hazleton; state secretary, Samuel Wilson, Philadelphia; state council treasurer, Charles A. Jones, Pittsburgh.

Worked That Time, Anyway.

In the Irish rebellion a bewildered Irishman was commanded to surrender. Pat declined it with a low bow, and it was "Pat Murphy and the flag" all behind him. "Pat," exclaimed Pat, "you're a fool. Is it time to lose anything by being purlite?"

PUSHING WORK ON THE STATE ROADS

Hurrying Work along before Cold Weather Halts Operations. More Time Made between New Oxford and Gettysburg.

The work of repairs and construction of roads in Adams county under supervision of E. S. Frey, general engineer of the state highway department is progressing in accordance with the contracts still be awarded before cold weather sets in. Owing to the lateness of the season only that work which is absolutely necessary will be done, so that roads will be in good condition for the winter.

Under the direction of Engineer Frey hard work upon the new state loan township, leading from Bust to Fairfield, started last month is fast nearing completion. The repair work is being done by stone and the old stretch of road covers 15,500 feet or 3 miles over two miles.

The work upon the state road under construction between New Oxford and Gettysburg is progressing satisfactorily with the gradual increase of the force of employees. About 50 men are now engaged on the contract. The work is expected to be completed by the first of December, when the contractors will be given their checks. Last week 1,000 feet of stone was laid during the very cold weather, 1,500 feet was laid the week before and 2,000 feet in Dahlbing has the contract.

This is the old York and Gettysburg turnpike, which was condemned a number of years ago. The construction of the road was completed during 1910, and the present season will see it finished. At the last meeting of the railroad Commissioner to Gettysburg. In 1909 the turnpike did not use the stockholders who neglected it, and later it was condemned.

Numerous repairs have been made and have made in the county and will continue generally have been much improved
